BURNS FATAL TO PASTOR'S WIFE

MRS. STROSCHER STARTS FIRE WITH OIL AND IS BURNED

Mrs. Otto Stroschein, aged 49 years, wife of the former pastor of the Evangelical at Green Garden, died Saturday afternoon at the St. James hospital, Chicago Heights as the result of serious burns sustained early Saturday. Mrs. Stroschein had gotten up quite early to start a fire in the kitchen stove and as the kindling did not ignite as fast as she had desired, she got the kerosene can and poured the coal oil on the coal. The oil came in contact with a live coal and there was a sudden explosion and a sheet of flame enveloped the unfortunate woman. Her screams awoke her son Otto who was still sleeping. He hurried to his mother's rescue but in spite of his efforts she was so seriously burned that there was no chance to save her life, although she was rushed to the hospital with all possible haste.

Funeral services were held from the Zechlin undertaking parlors at Frankfort Tuesday afternoon, the son of the deceased preaching the funeral sermon. Burial took place in the Pleasant Hill cemetery at Frankfort.

The deceased is survived by her husband, Rev. Otto Stroschein now in Germany and one son Otto who was making his home with his mother in Chicago Heights.

It will be remembered that Rev. Stroschein and his son were active in an airplane building project at Frankfort several years ago, the Rev. Mr. Stroschein claiming to be the inventor of a motor that was going to revolutionize the airplane building industry. It seems he was not able to get his motor manufactured in this country as he had planned so he went to Germany with the idea of perfecting his motor and having it built there. He has been in that country for sometime, but nothing further has been heard of his airplane project.

The many friends of this family deeply sympathize with them in the tragic hour that has befallen them.

Miss Katie Barenz of Mokena Weds George Meyer

Miss Katie Barenz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Barenz of Mokena and George H. Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Meyer of the town of Rich, were united in marriage at the home of the bride in Mokena on Wednesday evening at six o'clock, the Rev. Wm. Kreis of the St. John Evangelical church performing the ceremony.

The bride was attired in white silk canton crepe trimmed with beads and wore a long tulle veil caught up with lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Wm. Kreis played the wedding march. There were no attendants. Following the ceremony which was witnessed by about forty guests a five course dinner was served.

A large company of the bridal couple's friends from Mokena and Tinley Park serenaded them with tin music the same evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer will make their future home on a farm near Coopers Grove. The bride was in the employ of the former Rothschild store in Chicago before her marriage. The young couple are well known and enjoy the esteem of a circle of friends who wish them much joy and happiness.

GETS COMMISSION

Minor W. Anderson, a former member of the News-Bulletin staff and now a sophomore at the University of Illinois, has just been second lieutenant in the infantry unit of the Reserve Officers Training Corps at the University. Mr. Anderson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson of Joliet.

MORTGAGES HER WEDDING GIFTS; SUIT FOLLOWS

Mrs. Edna Kreis filed a suit for separate maintenance against her husband, Arthur Kreis, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Kreis of Mokena Monday of this week in the Will County Circuit court, charging him with cruelty.

According to the bill filed by Mrs. Kreis her husband commenced a course of unkind, cruel and inhuman conduct towards her three months after their marriage which took place on June 24, 1923 and which course continued until she finally separated from him on Sunday, March 16th this year.

Mrs. Kreis makes these specific charges against her husband in her bill:

That shortly after their marriage he, without the consent or knowledge of his wife, mortgaged the household furniture, all of which, excepting the Victrola, she had received from her parents as wedding gifts, and with the money raised by the said chattel mortgage he purchased a Ford touring car on the installment plan, and that shortly thereafter he demanded that his wife pay the balance due on the car and she claims she paid $100 towards the payments on this auto; and shortly thereafter he again demanded money from his wife, she having received from her father, William Bechstein, $1000 as a wedding present. When she refused to advance further money to him, saying that she desired to keep her own money because in the future emergencies might arise whereby it might be a benefit, rather than to spend it for an automobile whereupon she charges he became angry and used opprobrious epithets toward her and struck her a severe blow. She further charges that for the same reasons this treatment was again repeated on November 29, 1923 and that again about a month thereafter while they planned to visit with their folks in Mokena, the defendant demanded that his wife accompany him to the home of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Kreis, but she stated that she wanted to spend part of the visit with her mother, and he again became abusive and attempted to choke her. About the middle of February, 1924 there was another violent outburst in which Mrs. Kreis charges her husband said he hated her and struck her.

The final crash came on Sunday, March 16th when Mrs. Kreis sets forth in her bill, she and her husband attended church services at Mokena where Rev. Wm. Kreis, the father of the defendant conducted the same. Mrs. Kreis charges that her husband demanded an opinion of her as to the sermon delivered by his father, and when she failed to make the desired favorable comment, he became angry and she charges his conduct was such that she was obliged to leave him.

In her bill Mrs. Kreis prays the court to restrain the defendant from selling or disposing of the automobile and the household furniture. Mrs. Kreis states in her bill of complaint that her husband holds a good position with the Public Service Company at Joliet and prays the court to issue an injunction against this company restraining them from paying any of his wages due him until the further order of the court.

Attorney A. H. Krusemark is representing Mrs. Kreis. The case is set for hearing in the May term of court.

ANNOUNCEMENT—I have purchased a new truck and am engaged in the trucking business again. I am doing all kinds of trucking at the same old reasonable prices.

Mayor Raschke Gives Summary of Year's Progress In Orland

The News-Bulletin has been at all times interested in the progress of the communities which it serves and is preparing to run a series of articles from the several towns showing what progress has been made and in what manner in these communities. The following subjoined article by Mayor Louis Raschke of Orland is the first of the series:

Dear Editor:

In response to your request as to results during my short administration as President of the Village of Orland Park, I may mention in brief the following which the Administration has accomplished.

Installing a water main for the especial benefit of schools and churches, thereby affording increased fire protection for the public in general.

Realizing that people in our Village, especially the children, were subjected to the great danger of lawless and reckless driving of motorists through Orland Park, and the necessity of police protection for our homes against robbery, a motorcycle police service was created in consequence.

Ordinance drawn up and passed for more rigid taxation of business enterprises which are taxable within the scope of the law. The old enforcement laws have been very lax in this respect.

Pre-election promises for a street through sub-division has been fulfilled. Better street would have been made, but account of depleted treasury no more funds were available. Electric light pledge also well underway. expect service by June 1st.

ORLAND MAN BACK FROM CAL

Mr. Charles Hahnelin who has spent the greater part of the winter in California returned to his home last week reporting a most enjoyable vacation.

Account of the various undertakings of improvements during this administration we were compelled to resort to legal advice, and in consequence an attorney was appointed at a very nominal fee. This is not out of the ordinary for the average Village, but on account of no noticeable work of improvement prior to the administration, legal talent has not been necessary heretofore. Might mention that the ordinances at the beginning of this administration were so flexible that it involved considerable thought, advice and council to make them rigid for enforcement.

As regards future improvements, it is the intention of the administration to effect a proficient fire apparatus, rigged up with chemical tanks, hose and ladder. The apparatus can be stored in any garage; that in the event of fire, the garage men can manipulate the car or truck and apply the hose in any well or cistern to pump water out of. This is one of the most essentials for Orland Park. Now that the new Administration has demonstrated its progressiveness, let us continue to further developments by giving the Administration your hearty co-operation and support. We need your financial help for continued improvements in Orland Park (this meaning the residents of Orland.)

Come to the Council meetings you citizens of Orland Park and present your protests and dissatisfactions if you have any. Same will be given the utmost consideration possible.

Respectfully,

LOUIS C. RASCHKE,

Mayor of Orland Park, Ill.

A STATEMENT TO THE PUBLIC

Recently I have been accused by some people of being a member of the Catholic church and by others as being a member of the Klu Klux Klan. While I have the greatest regards and respect for both, I want to emphatically deny these statements as I am not a member of either.

I am of one opinion on this subject and that is that religion and politics should not mix. Therefore I hold myself neutral, and am impartial to all.

The only plea that I can make in this election, is that we should not let lodge or religion affiliations interfere with our duties as American Citizens and that is to vote for the man best fitted for office, who is honest and upright in his dealings with the public at large.

On this Platform I am hoping for your support unreservedly.

Sincerely

John M. Bettenhausen

TO THE VOTERS OF FRANKFORT TOWNSHIP

The office of Highway Commissioner is one of the most important in the township and I believe I am fully qualified to fill the job, and promise you faithful and honest performance of my duty with the least possible appropriation the office can efficiently be run with, saving every dollar for the taxpayer I can.

I have been a life long resident of this township and solicit your support in my race for the office of Highway Commissioner of Frankfort township.

May I count on your friendship and help in the coming town election?

Your vote and support will be appreciated.

EMIL D. CAPPEL.

NEW LENOX TEACHER ILL

There was no school in Miss Spruce's room Monday on account of the illness of the teacher.

Frankfort Politics Are Red Hot

Town politics were red hot in Frankfort township last Saturday when the Republican and People's Party caucuses were held at Mokena. The Republican caucus was a tame affair. There was no opposition and the following candidates were nominated: for supervisor, Wm. Lankenau; town clerk Karl E. Krapp; Assessor Joseph Kohl; highway commissioner Fred Marti; school trustee, Emil P. Krapp.

At the People's caucus the fight centered on highway commissioner and it was a hot one. Emil D. Cappel and Christ Warning, the latter being the present incumbent of this office, marshalled their forces. After the smoke of battle had been raised it was found Cappel had won by 20 votes. The following candidates were nominated: town clerk, Henry A. Gauthier; commissioner of highways Emil D. Cappel; school trustee Dan C. Lauffer. Mr. Warning got busy after the caucus and circulated a petition and got enough signers on same so that his name could be placed on the Independent ticket for highway commissioner.

Mokena Pastor Is Honored

Rev. A. R. Mangus, pastor of the Mokena M. E. church had special honors conferred upon him the past week. Last Sunday he was delegated to address a large student body at De Pau University in Indiana. He has also been chosen as a delegate to the great Volunteer Students convention to be held at Louisville, Ky., sometime next month. This is the greatest forward movement in the country and will also be the largest convention of young Christian workers ever held in this country it is said.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO TOWN OF FRANKFORT VOTERS

I am a candidate for re-election to the office of highway commissioner of Frankfort township on the Independent ticket. On my past record as highway commissioner and on what I have accomplished for this township, I respectfully solicit your support and votes at the town election on Tuesday, April 1, 1924.

CHRIST H. WARNING.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE TOWN OF ORLAND

I am a candidate for the office of highway commissioner for the town of Orland and I will greatly appreciate your votes and support at the town election on Tuesday, April 1, 1924.

$10,000 Farm Sale at Midlothian On March 31st

The farm sale season is about at the close but the largest sale of the entire season has been reserved for the last. E. V. Maltby former owner of the famous Maple farm at Midlothian has turned this property over to the Chicago Title and Trust Company who will sell the entire farm furnishings and stock at public sale on March 31st. The entire herd of 30 head of pure bred Holstein cattle will be sold in addition to the horses, farm machinery, butcher supplies, milk bottling supplies, green house supplies and household furniture. This farm was fully and elaborately equipped at a cost of thousands of dollars. This will be the most important sale held in this section for many years.

The firm of Matter and Nemeth will be the auctioneers. Mr. Nemeth has been given full charge of the sale.

Want Farmers to Raise Sugar Beets

Frank Dickman of the Mid-West Sugar Company of Dalton has been calling on the farmers of Bremen township with the view of getting them interested in raising sugar beets. The sugar company will furnish the guaranteed tested seed at a nominal sum and guarantees a minimum price of $7 per ton for sugar beets and more if the price of sugar advances. It is estimated that 180 can be realized off of an acre of sugar beets which require no more work than corn. Last year the farmers around Chicago Heights put in 80 acres and were so well satisfied with the results obtained that 325 acres will be put in to sugar beets this year. This is a crop that will take care of an overproduction of grain and will bring the farmer as much money if not more than grain.

A meeting of Bremen farmers is to be held soon to determine just what course they will take in the matter.

New Lenox Has Hot Caucus Fight

The New Lenox town caucus of last Saturday was a regular stem winding affair. The big fight centered on the office of highway commissioner and more votes were cast at this caucus than at some of the general elections. The contest was

A GIRL AND A PRINCE

ONCE upon a time there was a peasant girl who was so beautiful that a prince fell in love with her. Every day he rode by the place where she was tending her father's goats and at last he told her who he was and asked her to become his wife.

"Oh, but I could never marry a prince," said the pretty girl, whose name was Nita. "And, besides, your family would never let you marry me."

"Then I will leave my father's palace and give up the kingdom and live with you," said the prince. "I shall marry no one but you."

"No, that would never do," said Nita. "You could not become the husband of a peasant girl any more than I could marry a prince. No, you are not good enough for me," she said, with a toss of her pretty head.

"You cannot plough a field or make a harness or take care of the goats

"You Are Not Good Enough for Me," or milk the cows. No, you won't do for my husband and I won't do for you as a wife, so good-by."

Nita did not give the poor prince any time to reply. She ran off toward her home so fast over the rough stones he could not follow, and home he went, a very sad prince indeed.

"What is the matter with you?" asked his father that night as the prince, with hanging head, refused to eat his supper.

"I am wishing I were good enough to marry Nita," replied the sad prince.

"Nita!" exclaimed the king and the queen, who had never heard of the peasant girl.

"Who in the world is Nita?" asked the queen.

"She is a peasant girl and she knows how to take care of goats and I don't, and she won't marry me," replied the prince. "I am not good enough for her. She said so."

"Peasant girl indeed!" said the queen. "She would marry you soon enough if we should permit such a thing." Then, because she was a woman, the queen wanted to know what was lacking in her son that this girl did not think him good enough for her husband.

"She said that even though I had servants to do the work I ought to know how it should be done, that a good master must know how to rule his servants, and that I did not know anything at all," the prince replied.

"She has some sense," said the king. "That sounds sensible, and I should like to know why it is that you don't know how to do something! A son of mine ought to be able to do anything. You don't take after my family or you would be able to plow a field."

"Indeed!" answered the queen, growing angry. "If he took after my family he would be able to do everything. It is yours, sire, he resembles, and not mine. Can you make a harness, son, or not?"

"Of course I can't," replied the prince. "I don't know how to do anything. No one has ever taught me. I am not good enough to be the husband of the peasant girl."

"A son of mine should be fitted to become the husband of any one," cried the king. "Go to work and learn how to do all these things."

It did not take the prince long to learn, and one day he proudly showed to the king and queen a harness he had made, and then one day he asked them to look at a field he had plowed.

"We will find the peasant girl now," said the queen, who had not forgotten she had spurned her son for a husband. "We will show her our son can do anything her people can do."

So they found Nita and showed her the harness and the field the prince had plowed, and the praise which Nita gave the prince for his work quite won the hearts of the king and queen.

When they found that their son was ready to give up the kingdom to marry Nita, the king said that the kingdom needed people with good sense to rule it, and now that his son had become such a good and sensible man, all that was needed was a princess quite as sensible, and he for one gave his consent to the marriage.

The queen, not to be outdone, gave hers, and that night the merry-making in honor of the wedding of the prince and the peasant girl made the welkin ring.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

PERHAPS a man wouldn't see so many shocking things about the modern girl's clothes, if that wasn't the kind that he always turns around to stare at.

It is awfully hard for a bachelor to reconcile those queer little springtime palpitations in his heart with his cynical views of love and his morbid determination never to marry.

Alas, if a woman could only be like the circus—never to grow old or tiresome; always to be thrilling, dazzling, beautiful, with a hundred fascinating tricks that a man never wearies of applauding!

The funniest thing on earth is to hear a bridegroom and a confirmed bachelor solemnly enlightening each other as to how to run a woman.

Every time a woman asks a man if he loves her "as much as ever," it sort of makes him begin to doubt it.

Even a satyr could win a woman, if he began telling her that his hoof needed "a tender woman's care" to keep them out of mischief.

The most fascinating married woman can always find at least one man to go about with, who won't make love to her—if she will try going about with her own husband.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

LULU

RECENT discussion of Loretta suggests Lulu as an interesting parallel study. Lulu is also the result of modern spelling. Its correct form is Loulou, a version which originated, and is still a favorite in France.

Its popularity is attributed to the Provençal Lora de Sades, beloved of Petrarch, whose story is considered one of the world's greatest romances. She is the lady whose praises are sung by the great Italian poet in his "Rime" or sonnets. She is identified with Lora de Noves, an Avignonese lady who died of the plague in 1348, and who was already married to Hughes de Sades in 1327 when Petrarch is said to have first seen her.

The romantic nature of the French caused the name of the lovely heroine to find extraordinary vogue in that country. However, Lora or Laura is scarcely euphonious to French ears, and she became Laura, and finally Loulou.

Yet is Lulu's talismanic stone. It is the symbol of sorrow, but according to an old superstition, it will protect its wearer from sorrow, since it has an almost unique power among gems of becoming a part of the very body and soul if guarded with jealous care. Friday is Lulu's lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

BERGDOLL WILL GIVE UP IN U. S.

Draft Evader Willing to Serve Prison Term; Arranges for Return.

New York.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, convicted during the war as a draft evader, has agreed to return to America to serve his sentence in a federal prison. It was announced here by Norman Hapgood, editor of Hearst's International Magazine.

Bergdoll will return at the invitation of the American Legion, which, through John Quinn, national commander, issued a statement declaring the legion had been accused of attempting to kidnap Bergdoll, and it was time to "show the world" that the organization stood for law and order.

The legion's offer was made by Leighton H. Blood, a member of the organization, who said he went to Germany to carry out a plan mapped out by Garland W. Powell, national director of the legion's Americanism commission, and Lemuel Bolles, national adjutant.

"My mission was to invite Bergdoll to come back to America with me of his own free will," Blood said.

"As long as Bergdoll was in Germany the anti-German feelings in the legion would be strengthened and would count in American politics. Therefore if a plan could be worked out by which Bergdoll could be brought back to America it would help everybody."

Blood said he was violating no confidence in giving a summary of the terms made to Bergdoll.

"Here it is," said Blood. "Bergdoll must come back. He must serve his sentence. The American Legion is not so much interested in Bergdoll as in the men who helped him escape from America. Let's bring Bergdoll back and have him make a clean breast and tell who the enemies in our own camp are. Then let him do his bit in prison. After that give him his money and let him go his way."

Mr. Hapgood said Bergdoll had sold his automobiles and other properties in Germany, and even selected the ship on which he wished to return to America.

U. S. Supreme Court Curbs Raids on Trade Records

Washington.—Upholding the district court in the southern district of New York, the Supreme court handed down an opinion, denying the right of the federal trade commission to direct fishing expeditions for evidence in the case of the commission against the American Tobacco company and P. Lorillard company, Inc., charging unfair competition in regulating prices at which their commodities are to be sold. The court says it is contrary to the first principles of justice to allow search through records, relevant or irrelevant, in hope that something will turn up.

Woman Put $150,000 Price on Silence, Daugherty Says

Washington.—That Miss Roxie Stinson, through A. L. Fink of Buffalo, acting as her agent, offered to sell to James W. Holcomb, Samuel Ungerfelder, Henry T. Ellis and M. S. Daugherty, her silence on the affairs of Attorney General Daugherty and her late divorced husband, Jess W. Smith, for $150,000, was asserted by Attorney General Daugherty in a letter to Senator Brookhart of Iowa, chairman of the senate investigating committee now inquiring into Mr. Daugherty's conduct.

Income Tax Payments to Reach About Half Billion

Washington.—The American people in filing their income tax returns this month poured $377,848,840 into the federal treasury and nearly $100,000,000 additional is expected before the end of the month. Reports were compiled at the treasury from all the 65 revenue districts, showing that the revenue collectors had actually received and deposited $236,507,516 and had received, but were unable to deposit because of the last minute rush, an additional $121,341,324.

"I WILL WAIT"

SYNOPSIS.—Solomon Binkus, veteran scout and interpreter, and his young companion, Jack Irons, passing through Horse Valley, New York, in September, 1768, to warn settlers of an Indian uprising, rescue from a band of redskins the wife and daughter of Colonel Hare of England. Jack distinguishes himself in the fight and later rescues Margaret Hare from the river. Jack and Margaret fall in love.

She stepped closer and he put his arm around her and kissed her lips. She ran away a few steps. Then, indeed, they were back on the familiar trail in the thirty-mile bush. A moose bird was screaming at them. She turned and said:

"I wanted you to know, but I have said nothing. I couldn't. I am under a sacred promise. You are a gentleman and you will not kiss me or speak of love again until you have talked with my father. It is the custom of our country. But I want you to know that I am very happy."

"I don't know how I dared to say and do what I did, but I couldn't help it."

"I couldn't help it either. I just longed to know if you dared."

"The rest will be in the future—perhaps far in the future."

His voice trembled a little.

"Not far if you come to me, but I can wait—I will wait." She took his hand as they were walking beside each other and added: "For you."

"I, too, will wait," he answered, "and as long as I have to."

Mrs. Hare, walking down the trail to meet them, had come near. Their journey out of the wilderness had ended, but for each a new life had begun.

The husband and father of the two ladies had reached the fort only an hour or so ahead of the mounted party and preparations were being made for an expedition to cut off the retreat of the Indians. He was known to most of his friends in America only as Col. Benjamin Hare—a royal commissioner who had come to the colonies to inspect and report upon the defenses of his majesty. He wore the uniform of a colonel of the King's guard. There is an old letter of John Irons which says that he was a splendid figure of a man, tall and well proportioned and about forty, with dark eyes, his hair and mustache just beginning to show gray.

"I shall not try here to measure my gratitude," he said to Mr. Irons. "I will see you tomorrow."

"You owe me nothing," Irons answered. "The rescue of your wife and daughter is due to the resourceful and famous scout—Solomon Binkus."

"Dear old rough-barked hickory man!" the colonel exclaimed. "I hope to see him soon."

He went at once with his wife and daughter to rooms in the fort. That evening he satisfied himself as to the character and standing of John Irons, learning that he was a patriot of large influence and considerable means.

The latter family and that of Peter Bones were well quartered in tents with a part of the Fifty-fifth regiment then at Fort Stanwix. Next morning Jack went to breakfast with Colonel Hare and his wife and daughter in their rooms, after which the colonel invited the boy to take a walk with him out to the little settlement of Mill river. Jack, being overawed, was rather slow in declaring himself and the colonel presently remarked:

"You and my daughter seem to have got well acquainted."

"Yes, sir; but not as well as I could wish," Jack answered. "Our journey ended too soon. I love your daughter, sir, and I hope you will let me tell her and ask her to be my wife sometime."

"You are both too young," said the colonel. "Besides you have known each other not quite three days and I have known you not as many hours. We are deeply grateful to you, but it is better for you and for her that this matter should not be hurried. After a year has passed, if you think you still care to see each other, I will ask you to come to England. I think you are a fine, manly, brave chap, but really you will admit that I have a right to know you better before my daughter engages to marry you."

Jack freely admitted that the request was well founded, albeit he declared, frankly, that he would like to be got acquainted with as soon as possible.

"We must take the first ship back to England," said the colonel. "You are both young and in a matter of this kind there should be no haste. If your affection is real, it will be none the worse for a little keeping."

Solomon Binkus and Peter and Israel and John Bones and some settlers

north of Horse valley arrived next day with the captured Indians, who, under a military guard, were sent on to the Great Father at Johnson castle.

Colonel Hare was astonished that neither Solomon Binkus nor John Irons nor his son would accept any gift for the great service they had done him.

"I owe you more than I can ever pay," he said to the faithful Binkus. "Money would not be good enough for your reward."

Solomon stepped close to the great man and said in a low tone:

"Them young 'uns has growed kind o' lovesick an' I wouldn't wonder. I don't ask only one thing. Don't make no mistake 'bout this 'ere boy. In the bush we have a way o' pickin' out men. We see how they stan' up to danger an' hard work an' goin' hungry. Jack is a reg'lar he-man. I know 'em when I see 'em, which—it's a sure fact—I've seen all kinds. He's got brains an' courage, an' a tough arm an' a good heart. He'd die for a friend any day. Ye kain't do no more. So don't make no mistake 'bout him. He ain't no hemlock bow. I calculate there ain't no better man-timber nowhere—no, sir, no nowhere in this world—call it king or lord or duke or any name ye like. So, sir, if ye feel like doin' suthin' fer me—which I didn't never expect it, when I done what I did—I'll say be good to the boy. You'd never have to be 'shamed o' him."

"He's a likely lad," said Colonel Hare. "And I am rather impressed by your words, although they present a view that is new to me. We shall be returning soon and I dare say they will presently forget each other, but if not, and he becomes a good man—as good a man as his father—let us say—and she should wish to marry him, I would gladly put her hand in his."

At Fort Stanwix, John Irons sold his farm and house and stock to Peter Bones and decided to move his family to Albany, where he could educate his children. Both he and his wife had grown weary of the loneliness of the back country, and the peril from which they had been delivered was a deciding factor. So it happened that the Irons family and Solomon went to Albany by bateau with the Hares. It was a delightful trip in good autumn weather, in which Colonel Hare has acknowledged that both he and his wife acquired a deep respect "for these sinewy, wise, upright Americans, some of whom are as well learned, I should say, as most men you would meet in London."

CHAPTER II

Sowing the Dragon's Teeth.

That winter the Irons family and Solomon Binkus went often to the meetings of the Sons of Liberty. One purpose of this organization was to induce people to manufacture their own necessities and thus avoid buying the products of Great Britain. Factories were busy making looms and spinning wheels; skilled men and women taught the arts of spinning, weaving and tailoring. The slogan "Home made or nothing," traveled far and wide.

Late in February Jack Irons and Solomon Binkus went east as delegates to a large meeting of the Sons of Liberty in Springfield. They traveled on snowshoes and by stage, finding the bitterness of the people growing more intense as they proceeded. They found many women using thorns instead of pins and knitting one pair of stockings with the ravelings of another. They were also flossing out their silk gowns and spinning the floss into gloves with cotton. All this was to avoid buying goods sent over from Great Britain.

The meeting over, Jack and Solomon went on by stage to Boston for a look at the big city.

They arrived there on the fifth of March a little after dark. The moon was shining. A snow flurry had whitened the streets. The air was still and cold. They had their suppers at the Ship and Anchor. While they were eating they heard that a company of British soldiers who were encamped near the Presbyterian meeting-house had beaten their drums on Sunday so that no worshiper could hear the preaching.

"And the worst of it is we are compelled to furnish them food and quarters while they insult and annoy us," said a minister who sat at the table.

After supper Jack and Solomon went out for a walk. They heard violent talk among people gathered at the street corners. They soon overtook a noisy crowd of boys and young men carrying clubs. In front of Murray's barracks, where the Twenty-ninth regiment was quartered, there was a chattering crowd of men and boys. Some of them were hooting and cursing at two sentinels. The streets were lighted by oil lamps and by candles in the windows of the houses.

In Cornhill they came upon a larger and more violent assemblage of the same kind. They made their way through it and saw beyond a captain, a corporal and six private soldiers standing face to face with the crowd. Men were jeering at them; boys hurling abusive epithets. The boys, as they are apt to do, reflected, with some exaggeration, the passions of the elders. It was a crowd of rough fellows—mostly wharfmen and sailors. Solomon sensed the danger in the situation. He and Jack moved out of the jeering mob. Then suddenly a thing happened which may have saved one or both their lives. The captain drew his sword and flashed a dark light upon Solomon and called out:

"Hello, Binkus! What the h—l do you want?"

"Who be ye?" Solomon asked.

"Preston!"

"Preston! Cat's blood and gunpowder! What's the matter?"

Preston, an old comrade of Solomon, said to him:

"Go around to headquarters and tell them we are cut off by a mob and in a bad mess. I'm a little scared. I don't want to get hurt or do any hurting."

Jack and Solomon passed through the guard and hurried on. Then there were hisses and cries of "Tories! Rotten Tories!" As the two went on they heard missiles falling behind them and among the soldiers.

"They're goin' to be had trouble thar," said Solomon. "Them lads ain't to blame. They're only doin' as they're commanded. It's the pesky king that orto be hatched."

They were hurrying on, as he spoke, and the words were scarcely out of his mouth when they heard the command to fire and a rifle volley—then loud cries of pain and shrill curses and running feet. They turned and started back. People were rushing out of their houses, some with guns in their hands. In a moment the street was full.

"The soldiers are slaying people," a man shouted. "Men of Boston, we must arm ourselves and fight!"

It was a scene of wild confusion. They could get no farther on Cornhill. The crowd began to pour into side streets. Rumors were flying about that many had been killed and wounded. An hour or so later Jack and Solomon were seized by a group of ruffians.

"Here are the d—n Tories!" one of them shouted.

"Friends o' murderers!" was the cry of another. "Let's hang 'em!"

Solomon immediately knocked the man down who had called them Tories and seized another and tossed him so far in the crowd as to give it pause.

"I don't mind bein' hung," he shouted, "not if it's done proper, but no man kin call me a Tory lessen my hands are tied, without gittin' hurt. An' if my hands was tied I'd do some hollerin', now you hear me."

A man back in the crowd let out a laugh as loud as the braying of an ass. Others followed his example. The danger was passed. Solomon shouted:

"I used to know Preston when I were a scout in Amherst's army fightin' Injuns an' Frenchmen, which they're more'n twenty notches on the stock o' my rifle an' fourteen on my pelt, an' my name is Solomon Binkus from Albany, New York, an' if you'll excuse us, we'll put fer him as soon as we kin git erway convenient."

In the morning they learned that three men had been killed and five others wounded by the soldiers. Squads of men and boys with loaded muskets were marching into town from the country.

"It means that war is coming. We might as well get ready for it."

THE REIGN OF SOLOMON

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 1:7-12; I Kings 11:6-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge.—Prov. 1:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Young King's Dream.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Choice. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Wisdom and Folly. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Solomon's Reign.

Here again we must go outside of the particular text assigned and make a survey of Solomon's reign.

I. Solomon Anointed King (I Kings 1:5-40).

David had heretofore failed to show the people who should be king after him (v. 20). Through the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan, he is now stirred to action. He immediately sent for the faithful three, Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah, and bade them to anoint Solomon king. They speedily executed their commission, and soon the people shouted, "God save King Solomon."

II. Solomon's Wise Choice (II Chron. 1:7-12).

1. God's Gracious Offer (v. 7). This offer followed Solomon's lavish sacrifice to the Lord. God said, "Ask what I shall give thee," thus placing very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired. This offer to Solomon was no exceptional one, for opportunities equally limitless are placed before us. God is saying to every one of His children, "Ask, and it shall be given you." (John 15:7).

2. Solomon's Wise Choice (vv. 8-19). The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making his choice. Solomon did not ask for wisdom for vain display, but for the good of others. He desired inward worth, not outward show. In this choice, he asked for two particular things:

(1) That God's promise to his father, David, might be established.

(2) That wisdom would be given to him to perform his duties.

3. God's Untimely Gift to Solomon (v. 11). Solomon's petition pleased the Lord. Because he put wisdom first God saw that he could be trusted with material goods also.

III. The Glory of Solomon's Reign.

1. His Extensive Kingdom (I Kings 4:21-25). He ruled over the kingdoms from the Euphrates river to the Mediterranean sea, except the Phoenicians, and they were in alliance with him.

2. His Great Wisdom (I Kings 4:29-34). It excelled that of the Chaldeans, Persians and Egyptians. He had a singularly comprehensive mind. He was:

(1) A moral philosopher. He spoke three thousand proverbs.

(2) A poet. His songs were one thousand five.

(3) A botanist. He spoke of trees from the cedar tree, which was in Lebanon, even unto the hyssop.

(4) A zoologist. He spoke of beasts and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.

3. The Temple (I Kings 5-6). This was an exact reproduction of the tabernacle, double in size, executed in marble and gold. The amount of labor, skill and money expended on the building was exceedingly great (I Chron. 22:14-16).

4. His Royal Palaces Adjoining the Temple (I Kings 7). He was nearly twice as long in building these as in building the Lord's house.

5. His Commerce (I Kings 9:26-28). Compare II Chron. 9 and 10:21. His trading ships went east as far as the Indian ocean, perhaps even to India; and west as far as Spain.

6. His Army and Navy (I Kings 10:26-29). This was for more than display. He put his nation into a state of preparedness.

This greatness was associated with the name of the Lord. It was known that his fame was due to his relation with the living God.

IV. Solomon's Failure (I Kings 11:1-12).

Because Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, the Lord was angry with him and assured him that the kingdom would be rent from him and given to his servant. However, for the sake of David, he would not bring this humiliation upon Solomon while he lived. Solomon's chief offenses were alliances with foreign powers through marrying kings' daughters. This compromise weakened his moral nature and he soon followed his wives in the worship of false gods.

Sinews of Our Service

THROUGH winter's raging storms the electric transmission lines of this Company must be maintained in working order.

At such times construction crews and line-men are on the job continuously, battling the elements to keep the lines open and service to customers uninterrupted.

It is this spirit of service which means so much in an organization, where the activities of all employees are dedicated to the public.

Adequate and dependable electric service is a strong community asset.

Just a Word Why Churches Should Advertise

The writer was in Syracuse, N. Y., one Sunday last August. He was detained because of an accident to his car. He wanted to go to church that night, but he didn't know where to go. He picked up the Syracuse Sunday paper and looked through it from the front page to the back, but there wasn't a word about the church or the church services. As far as the papers were concerned that city might have been churchless.

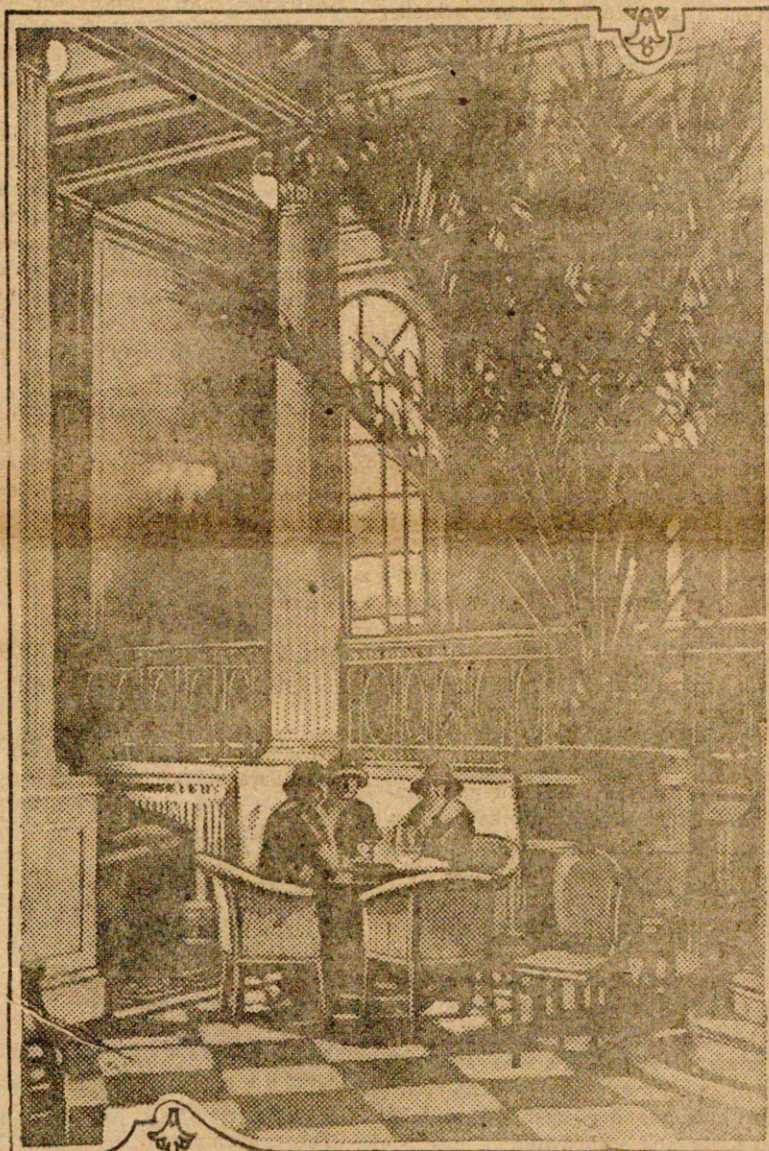

But it wasn't so with the movies and other houses of entertainment. Oh, no! Their invitations were spread in large advertisements all over the page. There were a dozen or so invitations to go out on Sunday night for amusement, but not one to go to the House of God.

Possibly the church notices appeared in the Saturday issue. They generally do, but this was Sunday and the Sunday paper was the one available. The amusement places do not overlook the Sunday papers.

There may have been many more in the city with the same thoughts and desire as the writer. He happened to remember that sometimes the churches have bulletins in the hotel corridors, so he took the trouble to go downstairs. Being a Methodist, he looked for the Methodist churches. There were two on the board, so he picked out one and took a chance.

We suppose that some will say that a man or woman who wants to go to church will find a way. That's true, but why permit the theatres to have the monopoly? Isn't the church a business? If it isn't, it's time it was. Think it over.

D. R. Anderson For Congress

On April 8th, the Republican voters of Will, Kane, Du Page and McHenry counties, which comprise the Eleventh Congressional District, will select their candidate for Congress.

The Republican majority of the district makes a nomination really an election to office, although the formal election does not come until next November.

For that reason the voters in the coming primary have considerable responsibility. They have five candidates from whom to choose the man who will represent them in Congress for the next two years.

D. R. Anderson should be the choice of the Republicans for Congress—

First, because he is a man of character and reputation. Never has he been guilty of, nor charged with, a dishonorable act. He is a good neighbor, pays his debts and keeps his word.

Second, because of his education. Education makes for power and a better understanding among men and nations. Mr. Anderson has always been a student, but with the faculty of putting his studies to practical advantages, and he is one of the best informed men in the district on public questions.

Third, because of his experience and training. He has lived among and been familiar with people of all conditions and walks of life. His father was a coal miner, and D. R. himself worked in the mines as a boy until he was injured. He has taught school and served as County Superintendent of Schools when he was 24 years old. He has clerked in stores and offices. He worked his way thru the University of Michigan and graduated from the college of law there. He has practiced law 24 years, 18 of them being in Joliet. He is a farm owner and a practical farmer. Such a background would be invaluable for a man in a public office that deals with the rights and interests of his neighbors.

Fourth, because he has reached the age of discretion and is not given to hasty or immature judgments and opinions.

Fifth, because he has made a success of all that he has attempted. Struggling upward from an obscure beginning he is now regarded as one of the most capable members of the Will County bar, and is recognized throughout the community as a man of ability and standing. It is logical to assume that if he can make a success of his private and professional life he can succeed in public office, if given the opportunity.

Sixth, because he is and always has been a staunch Republican. In eight campaigns he has stumped the state in behalf of the party. In three presidential campaigns he was sent out as a speaker of the Republican National Committee to tour the country, and because of his tact and persuasive oratory, he was sent into states below the Mason-Dixon line to wear votes away from Democracy—and was successful at it!

Mr. Anderson is not one to shoot off on tangents but is a progressive Republican who may be depended upon to pursue and hold to a safe and constructive course.

Voting for him is like investing in government securities—it is safe.

ORLAND

(Carried over from last week)

The collection for the new organ for Christ Lutheran church is progressing very favorably. Hardly a refusal was experienced by the collectors. Up to date over $600 has been pledged. Christ Habenicht is the collector.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Rudolph Lillwitz celebrated her birthday by inviting a number of her friends to spend the afternoon with her. Bunco was played and Mrs. Herman Nicolai scored highest point receiving a beautiful buffet set for the reward. A dainty luncheon was served by the hostess assisted by her sisters from Chicago.

Charles Hahnelein, local coal dealer is still enjoying himself in sunny California.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Olke have moved into the house owned by Mrs. Arnold and Enders of this place.

Mr. Stewart and Mr. Roy Loebe spent the week end at their homes here.

Miss Sarah Kruspe, telephone operator at Homewood, spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Christel Kohler of Homer, spent Sunday at the Gebhardt Koehler home.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Yunker are the proud parents of a baby girl born on March 8th.

Saturday evening while Mr. J. F. Schmaedke was driving his Saxon sedan, it suddenly caught on fire. Mr. Schmaedke happened to be near his home and so a fire extinguisher and plenty of help was at hand in a few moments, saving the car with only small damage done.

Mr. Harry and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Mohr spent Sunday with their mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Mohr.

Mrs. Jacob Youngs spent Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Cox.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nicolai and children Aldin and Alice spent Sunday with relatives in Chicago.

ISN'T IT FUNNY?

Suppose you tell a man that just a business man will do when his wife catches him kissing the maid; and starts an awful mess; and drags him into court for the judge to look him over and tells the judge what a soft old fool he is; and of what her suspicions of him always have been; and everything—that his first thought will be to rush to the newspaper office to keep the story out of print? The next day he turns down advertising with the argument that advertising doesn't advertise! ...

His Grouch.

"As the song has it, we are only poor weak mortals, after all." "Admitted," said Mr. Grumpson. "What I object to is the large number of persons with no other visible means of support who draw fat salaries for telling us how we are."—Birmingham Age-Herald

$2,000 Prize Goes to Woman Who Works for Work's Sake

"I did not enter the contest for the sake of the money," said Mrs. O. H. Dennis of Erie, Pa., when recently she was handed a leather cheque for $2,000, first prize in a world-wide essay contest on "Nothing Takes the Place of Leather."

"Of course," she smiled down at the cheque, "it is nice to win so much money. But I really think I got it by my interest in the subject itself, regardless of the reward. One of my father's phrases was, 'Work for the work's sake.' It has been one of the precepts of my life."

Wins Against 44,000

Mrs. Dennis proved what work for its own sake meant when she went about composing the essay that won the prize in competition with nearly 44,000 other contributors. Although she leads a busy life as a wife and mother, as well as being one of several society women who are responsible for the success of Erie's municipal theatre, "The Little Playhouse," she proceeded as though there was nothing to be thought about for the time being except her essay on leather.

She told about it in New York, to which city she traveled for the first time in her life, accompanied by her husband and eight-year-old son, to receive her award in person from the President of the American Sole and Belting Leather Tanners.

Getting Her Information

"I spent an entire month studying the leather market," she said. "Then I set about getting information from persons who knew most about leather—the postman, the policeman, who use a good deal of shoe leather, the cobbler, the shoe dealer, foremen in factories where leather belting is used, and with business men and sales people. I wrote to Washington to get statistics about the use of leather in the Army.

MRS. OLIVIA H. DENNIS

"Wrote and Re-wrote"

"After I collected my material I sat down and wrote and re-wrote my essay to make it coherent and emphatic in its presentation of the facts," she continued. "Finally I was satisfied and sent it off to New York and forgot about it—until I got the very welcome message that the judges had awarded my effort first prize."

Mrs. Dennis said she is not a professional writer. This contest, in fact, was her first. She simply applied the principle she tries to apply to everything. "Do the work with enthusiasm. If you do it well you will have ample satisfaction if nothing else." This time, as sometimes happens, something else accrued to her as well.

Prominent retired merchant says he feels like new man since Tanlac relieved him of his troubles. Can now outwalk men 20 years younger.

R. E. Boyd, 5000 Fourteenth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., for forty-eight years prominent hardware merchant in the national capital, but now retired, lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac.

"Indigestion and stomach weakness of a very pronounced type had troubled me for several months prior to last October fifteenth," said Mr. Boyd, recently, "but since that date the Tanlac treatment has made a new man of me. Now I eat heartily, never have a sign of indigestion, sleep like a log, and get up mornings feeling like an athlete. Today I can outwalk men twenty years younger. Tanlac alone put me in my present fine physical condition, enabling me to get more real pleasure than ever before out of meeting and mingling with friends. Tanlac has rejuvenated me completely, so to speak. It's the finest medicine I ever ran across."

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

SOME OTHER TIME

THE individual who defers action, puts off until "some other time" what should be done now, is marked by the gods as being of no weight or worth.

At his best he shrinks from everything that calls for manliness and diligent endeavor, always a stumbling block to those high-powered souls pressing on to blaze across the skies a record of a heroic life.

He cannot see himself in his true light, or estimate his faults. He is affronted at the kindly advice of friends and dejected at his inability to make progress.

What he has done year after year without getting results, he continues to do with his customary complacency. He is never quite ready to go to bed at night or to get up in the morning; his likes and dislikes are easy as an old shoe, for he experiences no commanding emotions, no hurt or depression of feeling in the hours of disappointment.

He is neither a fighting man nor a man of peace, being as limp and lifeless as a wet rug, lacking the energy and mettle that stir men to go to battle.

Jazz, with its jumps and jerks, is his favorite music. As for literature or art he has no preference, for he seldom takes time to read a worthy book or look upon a painting. He has no ideals, and he is said to his credit, he will frankly tell you so if he finds you are disposed to listen.

And such a man without suspecting it, acts as a warning signal to the earnest men and women who give heed to their engagements or consider it a sin to break them.

He is the bane of his wife's existence, being always late at dinner, making trouble in the kitchen and driving away her carefully trained servants.

That he is alive, yet dead, is unbelievable except to those who know him, and the ease with which he will with the utmost seriousness make a promise and forget to keep it.

Nobody will take him on trust. Having failed to learn that punctuality is the chief ingredient of confidence, he is woefully lacking of friends from whom he has unconsciously cut off his means of profitable communication by being habitually late and untrustworthy. "Some other time" has wrecked millions!

SCHOOL DAYS

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

TIMOTHY RUGGLES

IF a stranger wanted to know the pools where the trout were in the spring, or his wife the hidden slopes where the first arbutus grew under the leaves, they asked Tim Ruggles. To Tim at fifteen, every square foot of his grandfather's broken-down farm was familiar and dear. When his grandfather died and the farm was sold, it was to the boy as if the end of the world had come. He did not at all understand. Then he heard someone explaining the old man's bankruptcy by his never having been "able to look ahead."

From that moment, fifteen-year-old Tim began to take count of stock. Although he felt as if he could not live away from the farm, he suddenly realized that the village offered him no future. He contemplated the few dollars that were his inheritance, and took a temporary job at the country store. After six months he made up his budget; so much for railroad fare, so much for living while on the hunt for employment, so much for margin. Then he said good-by to his river and his woods for many years.

In the big city wholesale house he deliberately set himself to work. For a year he ran errands. He was prompt and reliable in all his work, and through contacts and reading he studied up both fundamentals and fine points of the jobbing business.

When a vacancy occurred in the sales department, he applied for it and proved himself worthy of a trial. He made good in it. So, as he worked at the present, his eye was always on the future. He had acquired the habit of "looking ahead." And as he looked ahead, he went ahead.

Eventually he married. When his son was seven years old, he heard that his grandfather's old farm was again on the market. He and his wife and the boy made an excursion over one Sunday to go to see it. It was the first time he had been back since he himself had been a boy. They hunted in the garbled orchard for the little red apple tree that bore such sweet fruit. They climbed the high hill from which a glimpse of the sea was to be caught. They even discovered up in the garret a dried bunch of herbs that through all vicissitudes had hung undisturbed upon the rafters.

"How I wish we could afford to buy it!" sighed Tim Ruggles' wife, looking at their son.

"We have bought it," said Tim. "I knew you'd want it when you saw it. I've been saving up for this day ever since I was fifteen—ever since I began to 'look ahead.'"

THE THINGS WORTH WHILE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE things worth while are not so many.

The things worth while are not so great; Whatever else, there isn't any.

Like hearts that love and arms that wait.

With all our working, all our scheming, With all our labor, all our guile,

With all our doing, all our dreaming, We often miss the things worth while.

All day we know the competition Of other men on other guests, We follow fiercely our ambition, A thousand daggers at our breasts;

But, if we battle on undaunted, Success may come, and fortune smile,

We yet may win the things we wanted—

And yet may miss the things worth while.

The things worth while, worth more than money,

Worth more than fame, or place, or pride,

That keep the road forever sunny, The heart forever satisfied,

Are children's sturdy arms about you, A neighbor's hail, a friendly smile,

Some soul that couldn't live without you—

These are the things, the things worth while.

If you have these, then cease repining; Your wealth is won if you can turn

Tonight to where love's light is shining In someone's eyes, where candles burn.

For rich or poor, or high or lowly, If smooth the road or long the mile,

If you have these to make life holy Your heart has found the things worth while.

Baked Lima Beans and Tomatoes.

Soak a pound of beans overnight, parboil for five minutes or longer to soften, rinse and cook until tender. Add one teaspoonful of salt to each quart of water used. Season a pint of tomatoes with salt and pepper and onion juice. Add it to the drained beans. Put into a beanpot with two thick slices of bacon or salt pork and bake until the bacon is crisp and brown.

Fricassee of Tongues.

Sheep's tongues or small calves' tongues may be used. Take four, cover with boiling water and simmer until tender, adding a few cloves and a small onion; season with salt when nearly done. Remove, cool, skin and cut lengthwise; season well. The next day, roll the tongues in flour and fry in butter and chopped onion until brown. Serve with a brown sauce seasoned with a dash of lemon juice. Serve with hot boiled rice.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because—

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You Do Not Gamble? Many a good party you have missed, haven't you? Many a sneer has been leveled at you—Isn't it too true? Yet when you hear of the doings in your heart of hearts you're glad that you stuck it out and didn't go back on your notion. You have missed a lot of things such as companionship, such as the half-fellow-well-met attitude of the crowd, three being included in everything. Yet the very missing of it has made the gang (only they wouldn't say it) think a "hull lot" of you. Who do they go to for advice, the fellow who sits up all night, and the fellow that treats money like dirt and cheats his family out of necessities, or the fellow whose office keeps office hours with him in it? Who, I ask?

SO
Your get-away is: Gambling's losing, not gambling's keepings: Sleep, cash, job and RESPECT.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

1,000,000 Farmers "Going Into Business"

WASHINGTON.—Over 1,000,000 farmers have "gone into business," via the co-operative marketing route, and to the tune of $2,000,000,000 or more during 1923, according to latest figures at the Department of Agriculture, where a survey of the co-operative associations is being made.

This exact statement, coupled with B. F. Yoakum's project for an interstate farm marketing association, heading up at Washington, as described to President Coolidge, and the plans of the National Council of Co-operative Marketing Associations for their new headquarters to transfer from Chicago to Washington, gives promise that the "farm co-op" will soon become as well known about the capitol as the "farm bloc."

The "co-op" is a slang phrase which has been used for many years to designate the loosely knit associations of farmers who make butter and cheese co-operatively, or bargain co-operatively for the sale of farm products. But in the last three years the introduction of the California contract plan, which guarantees the delivery of the farmers' entire crop to the association selling agents, has worked a remarkable evolution in the marketing of most farm products and the 1,000,000 co-operatives have nearly all been signed up within the last three years.

Erstwhile farmers, recently turned business men, attended in large numbers the second annual convention of the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Associations, recently held here.

Almost every co-operative who spoke described business operations running well up into the millions and showed how thousands of producing farmers are joining the movement each month, in the expectation that "co-operation" will stabilize market prices, and eliminate most of the waste and losses that come from individual shipments to a strange market, where the farmer has little or no representation in the dealing.

"Co-operative marketing," said former Governor Lowden of Illinois, "is our new national business policy. Thirty states and the federal government have passed laws establishing it. The Supreme court has approved these as constitutional. The Department of Agriculture, the war trade board and the farm loan board and the federal reserve board are all behind the movement, which was so badly needed to prevent farmers generally from 'going to the wall.'"

But Congress Will Not Buy the Land

ORGANIZATION of a committee of five public-spirited citizens to conduct a thorough study of the Southern Appalachian mountain range for the purpose of selecting the most typically scenic area as a national park has been begun by secretary of the interior. Invitations were sent to Congressman Henry W. Temple, of Pennsylvania; Major W. A. Welch, general manager of the Palisades Interstate park commission of New York, and Colonel Glenn Smith, of the geological survey, asking them to serve on the committee. The Council on National Parks, Forest, and Wild Life, with headquarters in New York, through its secretary, Barrington Moore, was requested to name two other members. In those communications Secretary Work said:

"As you know, there has been awakened a widespread interest in the East in the creation of additional national parks and several bills have been introduced in the Sixty-eighth congress proposing the establishment of areas in several of the southern states as national parks.

"Our national park system is the finest in the world and in making any additions to it, sites should be chosen that will be in every respect up to the standard, dignity, and prestige of the existing national parks. I feel, therefore, that there should be a thorough study of the southern Appalachian range made for the purpose of selecting an area that will be typical of the scenery, plant, and animal life of this range for a national park. I am confident that when such selection is made the various interests urging the creation of national parks can be centered in having the selected area acquired. As there are no government-owned lands in the East, excepting those acquired under the Weeks act for the protection of the headwaters of navigable streams and which are designated as national forest reservations, any area that might be selected probably would be privately owned, but little doubt exists, however, that when a suitable area is selected it will be found that the owners, through patriotic motives, will donate at least part of the land for national park purposes to remain as a memorial to their generosity and interest in public affairs. In any event selection should be made and the property purchased when the ground is cheap.

"I have in mind asking a committee of five public-spirited persons to undertake such a study and if you can devote the time this summer I would like to have you serve as a member."

No More Immigrants Till After June 30

NO MORE immigrants, barring a few scattered handfuls, will be admitted to the United States during the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, next, according to information made public by the Department of Labor. All Europe, except for Scandinavia and France, with a sprinkling of a few score or hundreds of immigrants elsewhere, has exhausted its quota for the current year.

It will be the first time in the history of the country, it is believed, that the human tides will have ceased to roll against the shores of America.

Under the present immigration law, which expires June 30, next, the number of admissibles is restricted to 3 per cent of the nationals of any country in the United States at the time the census of 1910 was taken. The total which may be admitted in any one year has been figured out by the Department of Labor at 357,803.

That total is apportioned among the various European and other nations affected by the law (South America is not affected), in quotas fixing the limit of immigration from each country. The highest is the quota of Great Britain and Ireland, 77,342 persons; the next, Germany, with 67,587, while Italy, with an annual quota of 42,057; Poland, with 39,977; Russia, with 24,405; Sweden, with 20,042; Czechoslovakia, with 14,357, and Norway, with 12,202, follow in the order named. Each of the remaining 38 nations affected has an annual quota of less than 10,000; seventeen have quotas of less than 1,000.

Under the Labor department's rulings not more than one-fifth of a nation's annual quota may be admitted in any one month. Even with this check the annual race among steamers to reach New York in the early morning hours of July 1 each year is participated in by from ten to twenty vessels, each laden with immigrants.

Before July the present law will be extended or a new law enacted. Proposals looking to a new law contain restrictions which would reduce still further the number of admissibles to 2 per cent of the nationals numbered in the 1890 census.

How effectually the bars will then be up is shown by the estimate that less than 200,000 persons would be admissible under such a law, as compared with 357,000 this year, 805,000 in 1921 and 1,218,000 in 1914.

Is Cooking for Her Fourth President

MRS. MARTHA MULVEY was cook in the household of the late J. P. Morgan, Sr., in New York, says the Kansas City Star, and was fully satisfied there when Mrs. William Howard Taft, knowing President Taft's love for good food, prepared properly, brought her to the White House and said: "There you are! You are monarch of all you survey." She stayed there during both the Wilson terms, then became Mrs. Harding's most important under officer and now is serving in a similar capacity for Mrs. Coolidge.

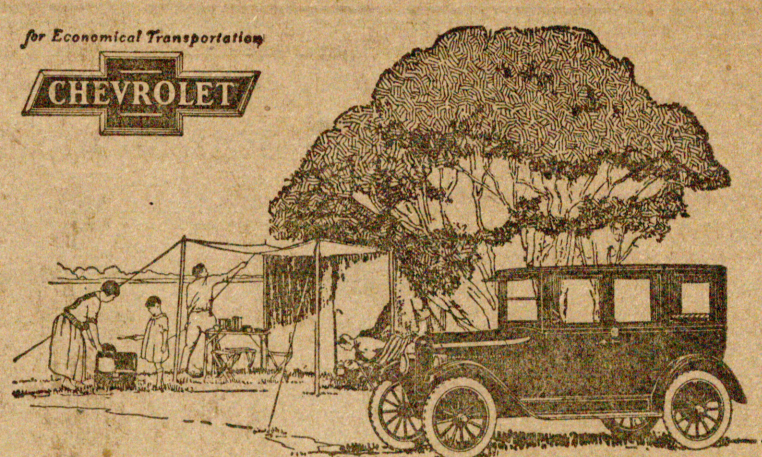

Mrs. Mulvey was born in Sweden something more than fifty years ago. She has been cooking ever since she can remember, but she is extremely modest about it all. She realizes to the fullest extent the dignity of her position and has invested it with a sort of sanctity that is entirely pardonable when you consider the personages, American, foreign, whom she has served. Her proudest moments come when some world-known celebrity insists on making his way below stairs to tell her personally how good her food tasted.

Mrs. Mulvey is main figure in a romance of the White House, too. She was working hard on her job there when she met James Mulvey, a special policeman, who had been guarding presidents for 25 years. This was during the Taft administration.

"You can't leave me," Mrs. Taft pleaded in considerable apprehension when she heard the news.

Accordingly Mrs. Mulvey fixed it up with James so she would keep her White House position, and now the Mulvey family is a completely happy one. Mr. and Mrs. Mulvey own their own little home far over in the northeast section of Washington, several miles from the White House, and Mrs. Mulvey rises at some unheavenly hour each morning and starts by trolley for the scene of her day's activities and enjoys it.

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seem dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

Trees Infected With Gypsy Moth Destroyed

Federal and state inspectors of the federal horticultural board recently discovered the shipment of 10 or 15 consignments of gypsy moth infested conifers from quarantined New England into Pennsylvania and New York. The trees were found, however, and were destroyed before this insect could establish itself in the new territory. The gypsy moth has been responsible for a great deal of damage through the southern part of the New England states, and its spread to other regions would be a calamity of nation-wide importance. In general, New England nurserymen are co-operating loyally with the government in maintaining the very necessary strict quarantine of the infested district.

The Revivalist's Conclusion

A revivalist preacher, at all times forceful in his language, his religion being of the "shirt-sleeve" order, had taken for his text "Vanity." To point his moral, he said:

"Now, if there is a woman in the congregation who didn't look in the mirror before coming to the meeting this morning, I want to see her; I want her to stand up."

A single woman rose and stood with meekly downcast eyes. To describe her in a kindly way one would say she was homely. The revivalist rested his earnest eyes upon her.

"Well, heaven bless you, sister," he said. "It certainly is a pity you didn't."

Why Pay the Penalty of Lying Awake?

MANY people spend hours at night, restlessly tossing from side to side, waiting for sleep. All because they drink coffee with their evening meal.

If the caffeine in coffee irritates your nervous system and keeps you awake when you should be asleep, recuperating your energies, why not stop coffee and drink Postum?

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine or anything that can disturb health and comfort. Many prefer Postum for its delightful aroma and flavor.

If you want to know the truth, change to Postum for a month or so, and see how much better you will sleep and feel.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

EDWIN F. DEICKE WILL BE WINNER FOR CONGRESS

Not a Lawyer but a Successful
Business Man and Farmer
—Sure to Win Race

On Tuesday, April 8th, the voters of the Eleventh Congressional District, comprising McHenry, Kane, Will and Du Page County, will decide whether they want a political lawyer or a successful business man and farmer to represent them in Congress.

Nearly all connected with the Tea Pot Dome oil scandal are political lawyers. These political lawyers who are accused of stealing, bribery and conspiracy to defraud the government today are being defended by political lawyers.

Every one of Edwin F. Deicke's opponents for congress are lawyers. When they announced their candidacy for congress they attempted to make it very impressive that they were good lawyers, where they studied law and where they practiced law, and the longer the law practice the greater the efficiency as a congressman they asserted. Undoubtedly many of the political lawyers accused in the Tea Pot Dome oil scandal are very great and efficient lawyers, sufficiently efficient to swindle and defraud the government out of millions of dollars to the cost of the tax payers, ex-service men and their dependents.

Edwin F. Deicke has made it very plain to all the voters of the district that he IS NOT A LAWYER, but a successful business man and farmer. Neither is he a silver-tongued orator but a man who can be thoroughly understood in plain English that he is strongly opposed to graft, bribery and dishonesty in the United States government and will expose and eradicate these evils at every opportunity; he is a fighter and will be heard from when in congress in no unmistakable terms, denouncing these existing evils which are destroying the great fundamental principles of our government, giving all that is in him for the enforcement of the constitution and every national law.

In no way does Mr. Deicke wish to discredit law, lawyers or the legal profession. The law of the land and of our country must be enforced, law and order must be maintained, and lawyers have a sacred duty to perform, that is to sustain and enforce law.

Approximately eighty per cent of the men in congress today are political lawyers and that is sufficient. What is more vitally needed in congress today are successful and practical business men, with out legal mind, but with good common sense and good business judgment.

Year after year, for years and years, DuPage County has been voting for Will and Kane County candidates. Now DuPage County has a candidate and the favor can be returned by supporting their candidate, Edwin F. Deicke, who is well qualified to represent all the people of this district.

Vote for Edwin F. Deicke, business man and farmer, endorsed by newspapers, business men, women labor, ex-service men and farmers.

EDITORIAL

James W. Faulkner, one of the Republican Candidates for the office of State's Attorney in this county is one of the best fitted men for the office in the Will County Bar.

He has practiced law for 12 years and is rated as one of the best trial lawyers in Joliet.

Trial of criminal cases, however, is not the only task of a State's Attorney. He is the legal adviser of the county and county officers, including the Board of Supervisors, and much of his work in this respect is of a nature of which the general public knows little.

Mr. Faulkner possessing as he does a sound, basic knowledge of the law, is qualified to meet these obligations of the office.

Too many persons are prone to think of a State's Attorney as a persecutor instead of a prosecutor. This is the wrong conception. A State's Attorney does not wish to ever convict a man of a charge of which he is not guilty. But when the evidence points to guilt then it is the duty of the State's Attorney to prosecute the case to the end, sparing no one in order to bring the culprit to justice. Therefore the county prosecutor should be a shrewd judge of character, and possessed of a thorough knowledge of evidence and the ability to lay this evidence before a jury.

By the same token he must be a man who is strong enough to refuse to prosecute when in his honest opinion the case is too weak to warrant conviction, and the trial of which would be a needless expense to the county.

Mr. Faulkner is a man who would take a keen interest in his work and the duties of this office.

He has pledged himself to appoint a woman investigator to handle cases in which young girls and children are involved, in the event that he is elected. This is a move forward in the right direction and is something that should have been done long ago.

The State's Attorney is the legal guardian and protector of every child in the county and in this phase of his work a woman assistant would be invaluable.

If Mr. Faulkner is elected we feel certain that he will discharge the duties of the office to the best of his ability, and for the best interest of the people of Will County.

He Fights a Good Fight for the People

When the Legislature met in all eyes turned to our newly elected chief, Governor Len Small.

Springfield early in January, 1921,

Governor Small had pledged a reduction in State taxes, a reduction in public utility rates, relief for the farmers, the construction of hard roads, the soldiers' bonus, the continuation of the Illinois waterway, a liberal support of education and the humane treatment of the thousands of unfortunate sons and daughters in our State institutes. His legislative program placed human rights above human greed. Could it be made effective?

Governor Small was at once the storm center of Illinois politics. His bills introduced as the legislative machinery began to grind, were stubbornly fought.

Excessive appropriations made to the Attorney General during the last two years of the former administration, had greatly distended the payrolls of Edward J. Brundage. Among his hundreds of payrollers were a number of House and Senate members or their "friends." In like manner, the ever increasing number of payrollers of the Chicago Sanitary District whose trustees were dominated by the McCormick-Brundage faction were also exceedingly hostile. The battle against Governor Small's legislative program was financed from the taxes of the people.

Governor Small proved himself a capable leader in the people's fight. He stood four square upon all his campaign pledges. Before the legislative sessions closed, his pledges were written into laws. He has put them into practical operation as follows:

Reduced State taxes by lowering the State rate from an average of 47.5 cents to 43.3 cents for the same purposes, during the three years he has been in office. This reduction amounts to Five Million Dollars.

Saved the tax-payers over Seven Million Dollars by his veto of excessive appropriations.

Governor Small's Public Utility Commission has reduced telephone, gas, electric light, power, and street car rates to the consumers Twenty-five Million Dollars annually

Governor Small's Tax Commission reduced the assessed valuation of farm lands 23 per cent or Three Million Dollars with a corresponding decrease in taxes. He gave our State the best and most advanced Producers' Co-operative Marketing Laws ever written into the statutes of any state in the union.

Governor Small has approved an increase over Twenty-four Million Dollars for education—an increase greater than the combined increases of any other three Governors.

Governor Small has constructed over 2,200 miles of durable hard roads from license fees and at a saving of over Thirty-five Million Dollars from prevailing prices when he took the office, and by refusing to let contracts at extortionate prices he was severely criticized by the Chicago Tribune the mouth piece of the allied profiteers.

Governor Small fought for and approved the Fifty-five Million Dollar Soldiers' Bonus Bill which later was ratified by the voters. He caused to be built several new hospitals for maimed and wounded soldiers.

Upon this record, Governor Len Small comes back to the voters for re-election—a greater man than he was four years ago. From out of the fire of persecution he has emerged with endurance, self-reliance justice—qualities necessary to successful leadership as Governor of the great State of Illinois.

For four years the Chicago Tribune and its allies have falsified all of Governor Small's official acts. No one has ever witnessed such a venomous campaign of political slander and premeditated mis-statements.

In this conflict there are two sides. On the one is Governor Len Small standing firmly for the people and their welfare; on the other the Chicago Tribune and its subservient candidate for Governor. On which side are you? Adv
